

ANDREW COUNTY

Its Organization and History,
with Reminiscences, Incidents,
&c., of the Olden Time.

BY AN OLD CITIZEN.

William Jenkins, confectionery and eating-house, on the southeast corner of the Square, is a place of fashionable resort. Mrs. Monroe's private boarding, on Main street, east end of town, is a first-class house, and well patronized; also, Mrs. Mason, on Christian Ridge. Joseph Phillips is always in his photograph gallery, ready to accommodate customers with superior specimens of his art, on the west end. Mike Dempsey and A. M. Southard, neophyte portrait painters, both prodigies for their experience, and whose work will compare favorably with the more experienced artists. William Frodsham has a large jewelry establishment on the north side of the Square, and keeps on hand clocks, watches, jewelry, &c. U. Oppiger, the west end jeweler, has a well filled store, and is an accommodating gentleman. Mrs. Buskirk's millinery establishment, on the west end, is a fashionable resort for ladies, and where is kept a store well stocked in the millinery line; also, Mrs. Oppiger and Miss Ent, on the west end, have millinery stores, where the ladies can be accommodated with the latest and most approved styles of bonnets, &c. Ladies can also be accommodated with the latest and most fashionable styles of dresses by calling at the stores of the Misses Walker, Miss Alice Conden and Miss S. Gibson. In Mr. Howard's new building is the neat and popular barber shop of Philip Brant, who is the most skillful workman in North Missouri. Mr. Nelson Graves carries on blacksmithing extensively at his shop on Main street, east end of the city. The Sannels brothers, Ed. and Bob, own the large brick livery stable at the southeast corner of the Square. They also run an omnibus to the depot, connecting with the trains, for the accommodation of the traveling public. Perry and Richard Buis run the commodious frame livery stable at the northwest corner of the Square, and Peter Neff, the large brick at the southwest corner, making, in all, three large livery stables in the city, all doing a very lucrative business. Two well supplied meat shops in town—Howard & Son, on the south side of the Square, and William Hancock, on the north side. Fred Becker & Co., manufacturers of vinegar, pickles, catsup, jellies, &c., just started under very favorable auspices, and are destined to be liberally paid by the institution. Waterman & Nash are the proprietors of the most extensive lumber yard in the west. They are also proprietors of the spacious grain elevator at the old depot. Joy & Co. have commenced a tobacco factory near the old depot, where they are buying and shipping. Charles P. Miller & Sons have the largest flouring mill in the country, a spacious brick and frame, which has the capacity to turn out 200 sacks of flour per day. It has constant employment, and turns out a superior brand of flour, much of it sought after in St. Joseph. Savannah is supplied with two banks: "The Savings Institution," belonging to John McLain and William Cook, and the "Farmers' Bank," belonging to a joint stock company. In the St. Charles hotel building is the post-office, kept by the very accommodating and efficient Postmaster, Samuel Frodsham. In the same room, on the opposite side, is the express office and news stand, kept by J. R. Watts. Newspapers: O. E. Paul, editor and proprietor of "THE ANDREW COUNTY REPUBLICAN," established 1871. Joseph A. Kelley, editor and proprietor of the "Patron of Husbandry," established the present year; and "The Advertiser," a paper devoted to home interest; proprietors, Glazier & Ashley; terms, fifty cents per annum. There are two Masonic lodges and a Royal Arch Chapter in the city. Savannah Lodge, No. 71, A. F. and A. M. E. W. Joy, Master, and Eli Mitchell, Secretary. Ben Franklin Lodge, No. 352, A. F. and A. M. C. C. Gee, Master, and J. L. Bennett, Secretary, and Savannah Chapter, U. D. N. B. Giddings, M. E. H. P., and E. A. Carson, Secretary. Savannah Lodge, No. 14, of the I. O. O. F. and Sentinel Encampment. The Good Templars also have a flourishing organization; also, the Patrons of Husbandry. The common school building is a spacious structure, built at a cost of about twenty thousand dollars, on an eminence in the northwestern part of town, and has a very commanding view, and is a matter of pride, and stands as a monument to the liberality and wisdom of our citizens. Professor Robert Cruikshank is principal, with eight well qualified and accomplished assistants. The students at the last session numbered about five hundred. The school is now closed; will open the first week in September. Churches, both brick and frame, are large, attractive buildings. The South Methodist, Christian and Catholic buildings are of brick, large and commodious. The Methodist, Episcopal and Presbyterian church buildings are frame, the former the largest building in the place, and was built at the cost of about ten thousand dollars. The Episcopal church building is under roof—not yet completed—is a neat frame, after the modern style of architecture. Lawyers and doctors are numerous, the former number fifteen, and the latter eight; lawyers: John Grabill, Greenlee & Pearson, Henry Stewart, Geo. T. Bryan, W. W. Caldwell, C. A. Whittaker, R. S. Campbell, J. P. Altgeld, Harlan & Madden, James C. Higgins, David Rea, William Heren and N. B. Giddings, Julius A. Sanders, I. R. Williams. Doctors: M. F. Wakefield, William A. Bryant, O. E. Holloway, J. G. B. Ferguson, H. Frasse, T. S. Howard, Geo. H. Davenport and Wood Martin. Savannah has many handsome and well built dwelling houses, both brick and frame. The business houses are generally of a substantial character, built compactly around the Square, principally brick. The east side of the Square was burned, over a year since. A part of that burned district is at present being rebuilt by Messrs. Carson and Hardy, with a magnificent brick structure, iron front, at a cost of many thousand dollars. Many new and handsome dwellings are springing up in every part of the city. Amongst other valuable acquisitions of the city is the town library, well supplied with histories and works of literature, arts and sciences. The jail and jailor's dwelling, Circuit and County Clerks, Probate Judge, Treasurer, Collector and County Attorney's offices are in the same building. The jail part, built of heavy stone, in the basement, the balance of brick. It should not be forgotten that there is a spacious wood-house in the Court-house yard, generally full to its utmost capacity. Three public wells on the Square. The one on the west end supplied with a well working wind mill, which keeps a large tank constantly filled with water. The east end well is supplied with a patent pump, and the one in the Square inclosure is supplied with windlass and buckets. The city is incorporated, and has officers who have proved themselves to be efficient, and have the confidence of the people. W. W. Caldwell, Mayor; A. Schuster, Joseph Phillips, Lewis Stiles, William Caldwell and John Conner, members of the City Council; Henry Stewart, City Attorney, and Richard Buis, Marshal. East of Savannah about four miles, is the Andrew County Poor Farm, containing over four hundred acres of land. The large and capacious house on the farm for the poor, built at a cost of over five thousand dollars, was burnt a few months since, without insurance. Temporary buildings have since been erected.

The Adjournment of Congress.

Congress adjourned, as usual, with more curses than blessings. But every such body is so composed and subject to such influences that it is to be judged rather by what it does than by what it fails to do. Those who described it as "a den of thieves" and a nest of jobbers merely declare with rhetorical vehemence that it has not done many things which they hoped would be done. But this Congress deserves to be honored for its freedom from jobbery and for its general high character, as well as for its searching inquiry into the irregularities and exposure of gross abuses of administration. It repealed the salary grab and the Sanborn contract law; it abolished the moiety system and the District government; and the good impetus of these acts will doubtless lead to a thorough revision of the whole revenue system. For the repeal of the moiety system is a far reaching blow. The sudden and immense reduction of the emoluments of certain revenue officers also reduces the pecuniary resources of the Administration party in the elections, and tends to restore the Custom-house to its legitimate function. That the salaries named are in all cases what they should, may be doubted. For instance, under existing laws, the position of Collector of New York is an office of such importance and power that it may be questioned whether a man of the necessary knowledge, experience, and ability is likely to be secured for twelve thousand dollars a year. There have been collectors of another kind, indeed, who have been paid very much more, but they were not appointed primarily to discharge the proper duties of their position. And one of the very great services of this Congress is the step toward a reform of the abuses of this civil service by restoring it to its purpose, which is taken by the repeal of the whole system of moieties and perquisites—except in cases of actual smuggling—which was intended not to save money to the treasury of the country, but to provide money for the treasury of a party.

Another important result of the reforms adopted by this Congress is the evidence which they furnish that the Republican majority was wise enough to know that the party is quite strong enough to criticize and reform its own measures and men. We observe that a "Liberal" orator the other evening proposed to his friends to join the Democrats, and recounted many of the abuses which the Republicans have exposed and corrected as reasons for opposing the Republican party. There is a fatal touch of comedy in all liberal performances just now. If Congress had clung to the salary grab, and retained the moieties and the Sanborn law and the District King and the Sanborn officers in the Treasury, and showed itself sullen and incredulous toward all complaint, there would have been some reason in the denunciation of the party. But, as it has been a peculiarly honest and a strictly inquiring and a radical reforming body, the invitation to step over and try the Democrats is exquisitely ludicrous.

On the other hand, Congress has evaded the passage of the Civil Rights Bill; it has virtually baffled a systematic reform of the civil service; and it has legalized a certain amount of inflation. But such action of course settles nothing. The award of the Alabama money for instance, is plainly unjust, but the just claimants will continue to appear. The rightful demands of equal citizenship, which the Civil Rights Bill would have secured, will be continuously heard until they are granted. The evils and dangers of an absurd system of the civil service will only strengthen the cry for reform; and the dishonored pledges of our national faith will still plague our business and our consciences. The political fact to be observed in all these questions is that there were no party lines drawn upon them. Republicans and Democrats voted for and against every one of them, except the Civil Rights Bill, upon which the Democratic members, as usual, spoke and voted as a party against equal rights, and, as usual, pleaded a constitutional objection. The Republicans, as a majority, will theoretically bear the responsibility. But at the polls, where the facts will be considered, this theory will not harm them.

Upon the whole, we are disposed to think that the session has strengthened rather than weakened the party. What most injures it is the final action of the President and certain leading members upon the financial question, for it shows both confusion of mind and weakness of purpose on a point which is most vital. It is in this direction that we must look for possible party division; as the paramount interest manifested in the expression of the party conventions, to which we elsewhere allude, shows. The feeling is evidently different in the West from that which prevails in the East. But the excursion of Senator Logan to Illinois can hardly have satisfied him that a policy of inflation would rally and inspire the Republican party, or furnish a victorious platform for a new one.—[Harper's Weekly.]
